THE STANDARD DIRECTORY OF RICHMOND BOROUGH. 1897-1898.

POLITICAL DIVISIONS.

Richmond County comprises five towns, four incorporated villages and many small villages having local designations. As there are many duplications in the names of streets it has been necessary to give nearly all of these local designations in the directory, using initials and abbreviations.

POST OFFICES AND FREE DELIVERY.

There are twenty post-offices in the county, two of which, New Brighton and West New Brighton, have carried deliveries.

The New Brighton free delivery district extends from the village line at the middle of Arietta street and Richmond turnpike, at Tompkinsville, on the east, to the westerly line of the Sailors' Snug Harbor property on the west. The West New Brighton free delivery district extends from the westerly boundry of the New Brighton district, to and including both sides of Jewett avenue from its junction with Richmond terrace, Port Richmond, on the west, Hart Park and Prohibition Park.

It has been necessary, in many instances, to give both the local designations and the post-office address, and where two are used the letters "po" are added to designate the post-office.

News Letter.

A thoroughly wide-awake, progressive PAPER in every detail. Appealing to an intelligent class of readers at all times, and always in touch with the stating facts as they exist, without coloring or trimming.

News of Staten Island,

Among the social set it is considered the Blue Book of Society, and in order to be in vogue Staten Islanders patronize its columns liberally.

As an advertising medium its value is unquestioned.
